About Our Lady of the Lost and Found One Monday morning in April, a middle-aged writer walks into her living room to water the plants and finds a woman standing beside her potted fig tree. Dressed in a navy blue trench coat and white Nikes, the woman introduces herself as “Mary.

When Marge Graziano first “met” the Lost Lady of Jerome in March 2001, she embarked on an unexpected journey of discovery that dramatically changed the course of her life. Drawn to the Honeymoon Cottage during a weekend visit to historic Jerome, Arizona, Graziano had the undeniable feeling that the “Lady” was calling to her across the ages. At great personal time and expense, Graziano answered the Lady's ethereal plea, making arrangements to purchase the dilapidated Honeymoon Cottage immediately and restore the “Jewel of Jerome” to its original grandeur. Graziano shares her remarkable story with wisdom, humor and grit in a new literary account entitled Lady Lost: The Story of the Honeymoon Cottage in Jerome, Arizona. A Five Star Publications book, Lady Lost is slated for release in May 2009. “How the home became a living, breathing entity was a spiritual experience for me,” explained Graziano. “Jerome is said to have many, many spirits that are with us. It seems the spirit of the Lady just placed herself in my life, and I had to tell our story.” Lady Lost evolved from a series of news clippings that were originally featured in the Red Mountain Times, a community newspaper formerly published in Mesa, AZ. Over the course of 26 months, Graziano published regular updates of the Honeymoon Cottage renovation project, and she fielded numerous requests for an anthology of her work. “My friends wanted me to go back and put it all together,” she said, “and they persuaded me to bring it to a larger market. Despite it being more difficult than I imagined, I am a better person for meeting the challenge and sharing this story with others. I believe strongly in preserving the unique history Jerome has to offer, and I can't deny the incredible effect that embracing the Lady has had on my life.” Graziano's commitment to restoring the Honeymoon Cottage has led her down new roads in Jerome that she never dreamed she would travel. Having established the Jerome Winery in a joint venture with her son, John, Graziano is presently engaged in expanding their vineyard and opening a second winery. She has also acquired an art gallery in Jerome's town center and is heavily involved in its civic community as well. She will welcome visitors to the Honeymoon Cottage this spring as part of the Jerome Historic House Tour and volunteers regularly with the Jerome Historical Society, Humane Society and Chamber of Commerce.

Marian Forrester is the symbolic flower of the Old American West. She draws her strength from that solid foundation, bringing delight and beauty to her elderly husband, to the small town of Sweet Water where they live, to the prairie land itself, and to the young narrator of her story, Neil Herbert. All are bewitched by her brilliance and grace, and all are ultimately betrayed. For Marian longs for "life on any terms," and in fulfilling herself, she loses all she loved and all who loved her.--From publisher's description.

One Monday morning in April, a middle-aged writer walks into her living room to water the plants and finds a woman standing beside her potted fig tree. Dressed in a navy blue trench coat and white Nikes, the woman introduces herself as "Mary. Mother of God.... You know. Mary." Instead of a golden robe or a crown, she arrives bearing a practical wheeled suitcase. Weary after two thousand years of adoration and petition, Mary is looking for a little R & R. She's asked in for lunch, and decides to stay a week. As the story of their visit unfolds, so does the story of Mary-one of the most complex and powerful female figures of our time-and her changing image in culture, art, history, as well as the thousands of recorded sightings that have placed her everywhere from a privet hedge to the dented bumper of a Camaro. As this Everywoman and Mary become friends, their conversations, both profound and intimate, touch upon Mary's significance and enduring relevance. Told with humor and grace, Our Lady of the Lost and Found is an absorbing tour through Mary's history and a thoughtful meditation on spirituality, our need for faith, and our desire to believe in something larger than ourselves.

A Woman Lost in Time... Luveday is a researcher and spends most of her time behind a desk or a book. When she is transported to Anora, another world that resembles medieval England, she is at a loss, but she's smart enough to know that a woman on her own has little chances of survival. She finds herself rescued by a knight on his way home to Lander's Keep, and works to make herself indispensable to the castle and its absent Lord, hoping that she won't be thrown out into the cold before she can find a way home. The King's Champion... Lord Iain De Lane returns home to find his ancestral castle, long neglected, has been transformed and a mysterious lady is responsible. His elderly Aunt, Lady Emmalyn sings her praises, in fact the whole castle and village have nothing but good to say about her, but the last thing Iain needs is another woman in his life. Especially since, his fiancé, Lady Christabel, has taken up residence unexpectedly, and despite the improvements, they are both finding out that a court favorite is not the proper wife for a northern Lord. Still, Iain is locked into a betrothal sanctioned by the King, and he needs the coin to keep his people fed. No matter how appealing Lady Luveday may seem in comparison, he could never choose the penniless noblewoman. As Luveday grows to be more to Iain and his people, it becomes clear that the Lord of the Keep has made a serious mistake. When the wedding draws near, and the lines between Lord and Lady blur, will Iain follow his heart and marry Luveday or will she need to make a hard choice of her own, and leave the place she loves or risk becoming more than a lost Lady, but a fallen one?

In the worst maritime tragedy on the open waters of the Great Lakes, over three hundred people perished as the sidewheel steamer Lady Elgin sank off the shores of Milwaukee in the early hours of September 8, 1860. In 1992 the remains of the wreck were discovered, and a legal battle over ownership ensued.

Marian Forrester arrives in the prairie town of Sweet Water as a young bride — beautiful, aristocratic, and spirited. To Captain Daniel Forrester, her pioneer husband, she's a precious jewel, and in the eyes of her new neighbor, young Niel Herbert, she's the perfect lady. But like the burgeoning promise of the American frontier, Marian's charms decline with the passing of time, and the world's admiration curdles into pity and contempt. Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist Willa Cather looked back from the perspective of the modern industrial world to an era when the American frontier offered an abundance of fresh possibilities. The country's inevitable change is reflected in this bittersweet coming-of-age story, whose themes explore the passing of a proud pioneer spirit, the triumph of materialism, and the struggles of women in a patriarchal society. A Lost Lady brilliantly recaptures a specific chapter in American history and its evocation of loss and nostalgia remains recognizable to readers of every time and place.

The #1 New York Times bestselling author of Women Food and God maps a path to meeting one of our greatest challenges—how we deal with money. When Geneen Roth and her husband lost their life savings in the Bernard Madoff debacle, Roth joined the millions of Americans dealing with financial turbulence, uncertainty, and abrupt reversals in their expectations. The resulting shock was the catalyst for her to explore how women's habits and behaviors around money—as with food—can lead to exactly the situations they most want to avoid. Roth identified her own unconscious choices: binge shopping followed by periods of budgetary self-deprivation, "treating" herself in ways that ultimately failed to sustain, and using money as a substitute for love, among others. As she examined the deep sources of these habits, she faced the hard truth about where her "self-protective" financial decisions had led. With irreverent humor and hard-won wisdom, she offers provocative and radical strategies for transforming how we feel and behave about the resources that should, and can, sustain and support our lives.
